About INA

The International Neurotoxicology Association INA is an organization of scientists working in the field of neurotoxicology. Fields of interest include all disciplines related to the study of the adverse effects of chemicals on the nervous system including neurochemistry, physiology, neuropathology, and behavior. Every two years, INA organizes a meeting in a quiet, and if possible, secluded place to encourage personal contact and the exchange of ideas among scientists from different disciplines working in the field and to facilitate the introduction of novices in the field to new colleagues and areas of interest.

Deadlines

Application for membership can be made throughout the year. Those received by April 30 will be reviewed by the Executive Committee and applicants will be notified by October. Applicants sending in their applications materials by October 30 will be notified by April.

Qualifications

The applicant must be a qualified person with a professional scientific interest in neurotoxicology, in addition to meeting the requirements for a specific category of membership.

Full Membership

Applicants may apply for Full Membership on the basis of

- (A) a record of peer-reviewed publications or
- (B) documented professional experience in neurotoxicology.

Those applying for full membership on the basis of publication record must have authored or coauthored a minimum of two peer-reviewed neurotoxicology-related research publications. Those applying on the basis of experience in neurotoxicology must clearly document activities and accomplishments supportive of involvement in neurotoxicology-related activities such as: teaching; appointment to expert committees, invited participation at neurotoxicology-related workshops, contributions to the literature such as text book chapters, monographs, etc. Attendance at INA meetings is also an indication of professional interest.

Student Membership:

Students with an interest in neurotoxicology who are enrolled full-time in a graduate degree program are eligible for student membership.

Dues

New members will be billed for dues after acceptance into membership. Dues are for a one-year period. Dues for Full Members are US$ 35.00 (EUR 25.00). Student membership is without charge.
